

Two-Year Visiting Assistant Professor of Psychology

The Psychology Department of Kenyon College invites applications for a full-time two year Visiting Assistant Professor to begin in Fall of 2022. Candidates with demonstrated excellence in teaching and interest in mentoring undergraduate research will be preferred. The standard teaching expectation is 5 courses per year, which includes introductory psychology, research methods, statistics, and courses in the applicant's area of specialty. We are particularly interested in candidates who would be able to teach Introductory Psychology, Research Methods, as well as more applied courses, such as psychopathology and/or counseling and community psychology.

To apply, candidates should visit the online application site found at <http://careers.kenyon.edu>. A complete application will be comprised of 1) a Cover Letter discussing the applicant's prior teaching experience, and the research and scholarship undertaken; 2) a statement of the applicant's teaching experience and philosophy, which should include ways in which issues and practices related to diversity, inclusion, and equity have been or will be applied to teaching and mentoring; 3) a research statement; 4) a Curriculum Vita; and 5) a graduate school transcript. Three letters of reference will be requested from candidates after initial materials are reviewed. To apply, candidates should visit the online application site found at <https://careers.kenyon.edu/en-us/job/492820/visiting-assistant-professor-of-psychology>. Review of applications will begin immediately. A Ph.D in Psychology is preferred; however, applicants who are ABD will be considered. For full consideration, please submit by April 1st.
